Section Number Four (30 points)

Imagine you are an editor in the Jordan Times. You find an article that has five mistakes. Find out these five mistakes.

Gases in the Earth's atmosphere hold in heat from the sun, making the Earth a comfortable temperature for living things. Those that trap heat are called greenhouse gases. Water vapor, carbon dioxide and methane are some of the greenhouse gases. When we burn wood, coal, oil and natural gases add carbon dioxide to the atmosphere. Carbon dioxide traps more heat, the result could be globally warming the Earth's atmosphere.

Punctuate the following sentences.

1. Her only response was a frightened oh
2. All the trees which were diseased had to be removed.
3. What a mess to clean up
4. Manal was right about Lina's reaction she changed her mind
5. Where are you I asked

C. Write a short e-mail to your English pen friend about your dream job, why it's your dream job, how it matches your personality.

Question Number One (20 points)

Read the following text carefully, and then answer all the questions that follow:

Recent research has shown that contact with dirt can increase happiness! That's one reason to begin composting: it's an excuse to play in the dirt!

Why else should you consider composting? By throwing food scraps and paper waste into a composter instead of your rubbish bin, you can create the greatest plant food on the planet. At the same time, you help to protect the environment. It's reciprocal – you scratch the dirt's back and it will scratch yours!

Compost is what you get when green waste (for example, tea bags, banana peel, carrot tops, eggshells and the like) and brown waste (for example, wood chips and paper) decompose. In a few weeks, the result is nutrient-rich stuff, full of the carbon, nitrogen and microscopic organisms that are necessary to make excellent food for flowers and plants.

There are many options for containing your compost. Some people have been making compost piles in any convenient spot on the ground. Others have built bins from materials such as recycled wood or plastic. There are also many commercial bins on the market.

Over the past decade, the practice of composting to turn organic waste into a valuable resource has been expanding rapidly in many countries, as landfill space has become more scarce and expensive, and as people have become more aware of their impact on the environment. Ten years from now, composting will probably be as common as recycling aluminum cans is today, both in the backyard and on an industrial scale. Many nations have made commitments or are legally required to drastically reduce the volume of waste being sent to landfills. Utilising kitchen and garden waste – which make up about 30% of the total – is a big part of the plan to minimize waste overall.
